

The Sacred Journey – Final Exam – Take Home Reflective Essay

Key Evaluative Criteria, based upon ISEM 101 Learning Outcomes:

Learn and integrate – Distinguish the humanities from the social sciences, and integrate diverse information (Indigenous) through these disciplines.

Think and create - Use multiple thinking strategies, such as critical, reflective, creative and/or interpretative thinking, along with Indigenous strategies to examine and solve a real-world human community issue.

Communicate – Through various sources of information, articulate, create and convey intended meaning using written methods of communication that demonstrates respect and understanding in complex and diverse human communities, especially for Indigenous communities.

Clarify purpose and perspective – Explore one’s life purpose and meaning through skills of reflexivity that foster an understanding of self in relationships to diverse human communities and perspectives, including Indigenous communities and perspectives.

Practice citizenship – Apply principles of socially responsible behavior and respect for diversity in an interdependent world to advance and sustain local and/or global human communities.