Millennium Dome

The Millennium Dome “was a brilliant way of doing something inherently meaningless” - Ken Allinson

The British people largely considered its publicly-funded $1.22 billion price tag a waste of lottery and public money. That it took another three years to finally unload it — at a cost of around $60 million more for upkeep- Time

Phillip Thalis, Architect:
“Which major city in the world is actually proposing such drastic intrusions into its harbours’ waters? Is the City of London doing this? Is New York proposing buildings, commercial private buildings for profit thrusting into its harbour? Is Paris proposing to bridge the Seine for commercial purposes? No, of course they’re not. It’s an absurd concept.”

“the worst of Dubai ‘look at me’ architecture” - Thalis

The Lord Mayor of Sydney
“clumsy Dubai-style hotel”.

Plans to sell works to China to cover costs

Because the utilities have been pushed to the exterior “the building is one huge draught, it isn’t airtight and it consumes enormous amounts of energy”, said Stephane Viale, the building and security director.

“The Italian architect, who maintains an office in Paris, has conceded in interviews that he made some mistakes, notably showing little concern for energy conservation back when such matters weren’t yet fashionable.” - N.Y. Times about Piano
