Proposed Catalog Changes
Effective Summer 2020

Department of Sociology and Anthropology

1. Change the following courses:

~~SOC 130~~ CRIM 101 Introduction to Criminology

3 credits

Gen Ed: Social Science

This course provides a general introduction to the study of crime, deviance, and crime control. Course material will cover crime measurement, patterns, and trends as well as major theoretical explanations for crime. Criminal justice institutions such as police, courts, and corrections will be considered along with specific topics as they relate to criminology. These topics include social deviance, violence, white collar crime, terrorism, vice, drug use, organized crime, mental health issues, racial inequalities, women and crime, and the depiction of crime in popular media and culture. Specific crime control policies are also considered.

Rationale: Change requested in order to align with the recently approved Criminology B.A./B.S. Degree.

~~SOC 325~~ CRIM 325 Family, Violence, and Society

3 credits

Sociological analysis of the family, its relationship to other social institutions, and the ways that the family is intersected by conflict, violence and systems of justice. Special attention is given to exploring the causes and impacts of family violence, strategies for its prevention, treatment of those abused, and intervention strategies for abusers.

Prereq: SOC 101.

Rationale: Change requested in order to align with the recently approved Criminology B.A./B.S. Degree.
